Chapter 1 by Savannah J.

Fight For Your Story. A website where you can write together, think together, and create together.

I clicked on the link as soon as I read the description. Unlike other websites, like Writepad, you weren't the only one writing it. Fight For Your Story was one of the greatest ideas I've ever seen, though there weren't many people apart of it. The people created a small community all on their own. I had to tear myself away from the computer that morning, having to get ready for some of the last days of sophomore-hood. I was brainstorming ideas, not sure if any were good enough.

Chapter 2 by bluedog

I decided to write my next story about me, well a slightly different me. I was popular. I had long shiny hair instead of my short frizzy brown hair. I was smart, athletic, and pretty. People liked me, including the most popular boy in school. I submitted my story and went off to school, not bothering to look in the mirror and try to fix my frizzed up hair. I biked to school a little faster, my frizzy hair wasn't even blowing in my face. I got off my bike and walked into school, and let me tell you, heads turned. I don't even know why, maybe it was because I didn't even bother with brushing my hair or showering.

"Hi Babe," said a boy as he passed by. Babe I said in my head.

Skylar, the most popular girl in school, walked up next to me.

"Savannah?" she said. "What happened to you?"

I didn't want to tell her about my hair unless I wanted to be like the other girls. I just wanted to be myself.

"Follow me," said Skylar. "I have a surprise for you." I followed her to the bathroom and my hair was still frizzy. I looked in the mirror and my hair was still frizzy.

I thought for my story, and I could tell someone else did it when I was back in the hallway.

"Jenny?" I asked.
